Students' Technical Article Competition

Research is the mother of all scientific innovations. In order to foster research orientation amongst our talented and energetic students, it is very necessary to enhance their independence to learn, think and synthesize on their own. 'PRAYAS' is our small endeavor to attain such an objective and help the present student generation to involve themselves and contribute ideas in recent research areas like Internet of Things and Solar Energy and also in traditional and emerging areas of Electronics and Communication Engineering. In this competition, student participants will get an opportunity to present their technical article. This will provide them the platform to share their ideas with other participants and eminent experts in the field and through technical discussions to emerge with improved solutions.

Selected papers will be published at <https://sites.google.com/view/prayas>
